Current Responsibility

Bob Meyer is a principal and consulting actuary in Milliman's New York office. He served as the firm's global casualty practice director and board member from 2009-2015. He joined the firm in 1987.

Professional Work Experience

Bob has significant experience on a wide range of property and casualty consulting projects. His areas of expertise include pricing, loss reserving, and financial modeling for multi-national insurers, specialty insurers, reinsurers, and self-insurers. He has been the lead consultant on many large, firm-wide client assignments often involving multiple lines of business, currencies, and languages. Bob has particular expertise in understanding the cost drivers associated with state workers' compensation systems throughout the United States and has specific expertise on the issues surrounding New York, Florida, Texas, and California. Bob's involvement in the worker's compensation self-insurance market includes pricing and loss reserving for school boards, municipalities, the heating industry, the home healthcare industry, and the construction industry. Bob often leads Milliman's efforts as project manager on loss reserving and due diligence financing transactions for multinational insurers operating throughout North America, Europe, and Southeast Asia. This also includes major reinsurance companies operating in the United States, Canada, Bermuda, London, and European markets. Bob also assists clients in their efforts to form property and casualty insurance companies, providing advice on loss reserving, reserve variability, capital considerations, rate structures, and reinsurance programs.
